Iman Abdulmajid, the widow of David Bowie, says she will never remarry because she is still waiting to meet him again. In a new interview with Harper's Bazaar, Iman opens up about her life since Bowie's death in 2016 and how she has found peace and happiness in her memories of him.

"I feel very connected to David," Iman says. "I feel his presence all the time. I know that he's around me. I know that he's watching over me. I know that he's guiding me."

Iman and Bowie were married for 24 years before Bowie's death from cancer in 2016. The couple had one daughter together, Lexi Jones.

"I was so lucky to have him in my life," Iman says. "He was my best friend. He was my soulmate. He was my everything."

Since Bowie's death, Iman has focused on her work as a model and philanthropist. She has also been a vocal advocate for cancer research and awareness.

"I'm not going to remarry," Iman says. "I'm not interested in dating. I'm not interested in anything other than being with David."

"I'm just waiting until I meet him again," she says. "I know that we'll be together again."

Iman's story is a testament to the power of love and the enduring bond between two people. Her words offer hope and comfort to those who have lost a loved one and are still grieving.
