In Jim Boeheim and Syracuse Basketball: In the Zone, author Bob Glauber tells the story of Boeheim's rise from a small-town kid to a national champion. With exclusive access to Boeheim and his players, Glauber paints a vivid portrait of one of the most successful coaches in college basketball history.

The book begins with Boeheim's childhood in Lyons, New York. He was a star athlete in high school, and he went on to play basketball at Syracuse University. After graduating, he returned to Syracuse as an assistant coach under Roy Danforth. When Danforth retired in 1976, Boeheim was named head coach.

Boeheim's early years as head coach were tough. The Orange struggled to win games, and they were often overlooked by the national media. But Boeheim never gave up. He worked tirelessly to build a winning program, and he eventually led the Orange to their first Final Four in 1987.

Since then, the Orange have been one of the most successful teams in college basketball. They have won five Big East Championships and made 19 NCAA Tournament appearances. Boeheim has been named National Coach of the Year twice, and he is a member of the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame.

Jim Boeheim and Syracuse Basketball: In the Zone is the definitive biography of one of the most successful coaches in college basketball history. Glauber's exclusive access to Boeheim and his players gives readers an unprecedented look at the life and career of a true legend.
